

MISCELLANEA.

Winter carries off more single girls than a frightful epidemic.
Miss Paim recently refused to wear a watch in her bosom, because it had hands on it.
"Or all the actions of a man's life," says Selden, "his marriage does least concern other people, yet, of all the actions of his life, it is most meddled with by other people."
DIOPHANTUS being asked the biting of which beast was most dangerous, answered: "If you mean wild beasts, 'tis the slanderer—if tame ones the flatterer."
The lady who "look a stitch in her side," has arrived at the conclusion that a stitch in the heel of her stocking would be infinitely more servicable.
"Is your master up?" asked an early visitor of the Marquis of Blandford's valet—"Yes sir," rejoined the fellow with great innocence, "but the butler and I carried him up about 8 o'clock."
"You look like death on a pale horse," said Jim to a toper, who was growing pale and emaciated.
"I don't know anything about that," said the toper, "but I'm death on pale brandy."
LITTLE boys are like post office stamps, because you must lick 'em to make 'em stick to their letters; and the difference between a post office stamp and a donkey is that you stick one with a lick and the other you lick with a stick.
A FORMAL, fashionable visitor, thus addressed a little girl:
"How are you, my dear?" "Very well I thank you," she replied. The visitor then added: "Now, my dear, you should ask me how I am." The child simply and honestly replied: "I don't want to know."
"Mr. djee-er bredren," said the Rev., Mr. Chalk, "my djee bredren, I a'pose you read in de scrip'tur dat in de ole time dey stoned de prophets—yes, and dey stone peepul to defur adultery. I've no doubt my djee friends dat many of you, if you hab libbed in dese daps would'n't a bin here, now—case you'd a bin stoned to def, long ago."
MAGNIFIQUENCE IN THE PULPIT.—A newly fledged theologian, making his debut before a country congregation recently, commenced his opening invocation in these words: "O, thou magnificent creature!" There was a general leaning of foreheads upon the pew rails, and a tremulous movement pervaded the worshippers, but no loud laughter occurred, and the prayer proceeded to its close in the same lofty strain. The sermon was perhaps more so.
A SCREAMER!—"Where is your house?" asked a traveler of a man he met in the depths of the "old solemn wilderness" of the Great West. "House? I ain't got no house." "Well, where do you live?" "I live in the woods—sleep on the Great Government Purchase, eat raw bear and wild turkey, and drink out of the Mississippi." And he added:—"It is getting too thick with folks about here. You're the second man I've seen within a month, and I hear there is a whole family coming about fifty miles down the river. I'm going to put out into the woods again."
Be not greedy of great gain. You will find it hard to eat more than a loaf a day—two coats worn at once are uncomfortable—a great house will remind you of your own littleness, and continually mock you with the thought that your last habitation will be cold, dark, and narrow, one that wealth cannot adorn, or make safe from the attack of the clay worm.
Throw away pride. Humility is safeguard in the well-travelled man is often made to stand and deliver. He who walks in the dark may break his head unless he stoops.
THE NEW GUDGEONS.—The following dialogue, which actually took place some years since between an old lady, who had much confidence in professionals, and a learned but eccentric clergyman, goes to strengthen a conviction already strong in many minds, viz.—that human natures is gullible:
"Now, parson, you are a man of much learning; I want to ask you what became of the eleven days, when old style was altered to new?"
"Well, well, madam, you know this world is hung on two great gudgeons."
"Indeed, sir! Well, what then?"
"Well, it had been turning round on the two gudgeons a great while, and they got worn out, and it broke down."
"Do tell me if it did?"
"Yes, marm. Well, after the world broke down, all the people turned to and put in new gudgeons, and set it going again; and it took 'em just eleven days!"
The old lady was abundantly satisfied, and would have given to the learned gentleman the degree of bachelor of science, without further examination.
"A HARD ROAD TO TRAVEL."—It seems to be generally admitted that "Jordan is a hard road." Jim Sherwood tells of one that, if not the variable "Jordan" itself, must certainly be its "next best friend." But let Sherwood speak for himself:
Time—towards evening; place—forks of the road, somewhere in North Carolina—log cabin close by—red-headed boy sitting on the fence, whistling "Jordan"—enter traveler, on an old grey mare, both looking well "beat out."
Traveler—"Say, boy, which of these roads goes to Milton?"
Stuttering Boy—"B-b-both on 'em goes thar."
Traveler—"Well, which is the quickest way?"
Boy—"B-b-both alike; b-b-both of 'em got there 'bout the same t-time 'o' day."
Traveler—"How far is it?"
Boy—"Bout four m-miles."
Traveler—"Which is the best road?"
Boy—"T-they ain't vary one the best."

EDUCATION.

It you take the right hand road and go about a m-m-mile, you'll wish you was in h-h-h; and if you t-t-turn back and take the l-l-left hand one, by the time you have gone half a m-m-mile, you'll wish you had kept on the other r-r-road—G. Lang.
PEDANTIC CONFESSION.—A pedant having received a letter from his friend, with a request that he would buy him some books, neglected the affair, and by way of excuse said, when he met his friend, "I am sorry that I never received the letter you sent me about the books."
EXCUSE FOR DULNESS.—Swift makes the following very good excuse for a dull man on leaving a circle of wits: "Sir, I suppose, by the laughing and merriment of the company we have left, there were many good things said—Now, as I never invent a jest myself, so I make it a rule never to laugh at other people's."
A BULL.—An Irish gentleman going to the Post-office, inquired if there were any letters for him? "Your name, sir," said the clerk. "That's a good one, now, said the Hibernian; 'why won't you see it on the back of the letter?'"
